

Relesi — Brand Foundation Guide

1. Name & Identity

Name: Relesi (relea.si)

The name is a deliberate construction that embeds three ideas central to the brand:

- Rel — Relationships. The core of what we do.
- — ea — Easy. The feeling we create for clients.
- — si / relea.si — Release. Letting go of a task that was holding you back.

The name feels like a product company, not a traditional agency — which is intentional.

On usage: The spoken and written brand is Relesi. The domain relea.si is the URL. For tech-savvy audiences both can be used interchangeably. For broader audiences, lead with Relesi and treat the domain as a secondary detail.

2. Mission & Vision

Mission:

▮ "Starting relationships with the people professionals wish they knew."

Long-term vision: The go-to relationship infrastructure for ambitious professionals in tech.

The word infrastructure is deliberate — it signals that Relesi isn't a one-off service but a foundational layer of how serious professionals build their network and pipeline. Use this framing for vision conversations. Lead with the warmer, human mission in early brand touchpoints.

3. The POV — What We Believe

Relesi is a bold, opinionated brand. We have a clear perspective on why most outreach fails — and it's not one thing, it's the entire stack.

The outreach stack is broken at every layer:

- Volume over quality. Most outreach is spray-and-pray. High volume, low relevance, no real targeting.
- Pitch before connection. People lead with what they want before establishing any context or rapport.

- Sales task, not relationship craft. Outreach is treated as a numbers game when it's actually a skill — one that requires judgment, tone, and timing.
- Lazy targeting. The lists are bad. People reach out to the wrong people entirely, wasting effort before a single message is sent.
- No GTM infrastructure. There are no proper systems behind the effort — no list generation logic, no sequencing, no architecture. Just improvisation.

Releasi fixes the whole stack — not just one layer.

4. Who We Serve

Releasi serves founders and professionals in tech — a broad category united by a specific mindset, not a job title.

Primary client types:

- Early-stage founders (pre-seed/seed)
- Growth-stage founders (Series A+)
- Independent professionals and consultants in the tech space

The unifying profile:

- They already understand the value of LinkedIn and relationship-building — no convincing needed.
 - They know exactly who they need to know: qualified B2B clients, thesis-matched investors, early users, key collaborators.
 - They're not heavy LinkedIn users — not because they don't care, but because their time goes elsewhere.
 - They've probably thought "I should really be doing more of this" — and kept deprioritising it.
-

5. Brand Personality & Tone

Three keywords: Creative · Easygoing · Straightforward

- Creative — Outreach is a craft. The messaging, targeting, and systems behind it are all considered and deliberate.
- Easygoing — Clients should feel like they're working with someone who gets it. No jargon, no over-engineering, no friction.
- Straightforward — We say what we mean. No fluff in copy, pitches, or deliverables.

In practice:

- Bold enough to have a real opinion on why outreach is broken — lead with that perspective.
- Warm and direct — write like a smart friend who happens to be an expert, not a consultant trying to sound impressive.
- No corporate speak. No buzzwords. If a sentence could appear in a generic SaaS deck, rewrite it.
- AI is part of the toolkit but not the hero — the brand leads with outcomes and relationships. Reference "systems" and "infrastructure" rather than foregrounding AI.

How clients should feel when they first encounter Releasi:

- "These people get the founder life."
- "This is the smart, strategic choice."
- "Finally, someone who makes this easy."
- "This feels like a trusted insider."

These aren't competing feelings — the brand should produce all of them.

6. What Releasi Delivers

The core deliverable is quality conversations that turn into real relationships — measured in replies, meetings booked, and connections that actually lead somewhere.

How it works:

- Hyper-qualified list generation. Targeted contact lists built using GTM engineering — not guesswork. The right people, identified systematically.
- Automated connection requests. Campaigns run from the client's LinkedIn, at the right pace, to the right audience.
- Custom messaging options. From simple conversation starters to manually researched, personalised messages — tiered by depth and intent.

The proof point: Releasi uses its own system to acquire clients. This isn't a methodology we describe — it's one we run on ourselves.

7. The Old Way vs. Releasi

Releasi doesn't position against a single competitor — it positions against an entire broken category.

- LinkedIn outreach agencies — spray-and-pray volume, no targeting rigor, generic templates.
 - In-house SDRs — lack strategic context, expensive, often disconnected from founder vision.
 - Founders doing it themselves — time-poor, inconsistent, no system behind it, keeps getting deprioritised.
 - No one doing it — the most common scenario, and the most costly in missed opportunities.
-

8. Open Questions to Revisit

These don't need to be resolved now but should be revisited as Releasi takes on its first clients.

- Lead client type. Releasi serves founders and professionals equally, but early content and case studies may benefit from a single anchor audience. Who are the first clients, and what do they have in common?
 - Name/domain presentation. Is the primary brand Releasi (spoken) with relea.si as the URL — or is the domain itself the brand? Decide before the website goes live.
 - "Infrastructure" vs. warmth. The long-term vision uses a cold, structural word. Lead with the human mission early and let infrastructure emerge as the brand matures.
-

Next recommended step: website copy. The brand foundation is solid enough to write a homepage — and it's the fastest way to pressure-test what resonates.